The 2008 Shanghai Annual Meeting - "Make Art Your Life"

The 2008 Shanghai Annual Meeting was held in February at the Shanghai Art Museum. The theme of the meeting was "Make Art Your Life".

The meeting was attended by over 200 artists from around the world, including internationally renowned artists such as Ai Weiwei, Yang Fudong, and Wang Guangyi. The meeting featured a variety of events, including lectures, exhibitions, and workshops, all centered around the theme of art and its impact on daily life.

On February 20, 2008, Shen Shu, a young sculptor who joined the Young Frankfurt Biennale in 2004, gave a lecture at the Shanghai Art Museum. Shen discussed his process of creating art and the importance of engaging with the audience. The lecture was well-received, with many attendees expressing interest in the artist's work.

On February 21, the Shanghai Art Museum hosted a workshop for young artists. The workshop focused on the use of new materials in art creation and featured a demonstration by a local artist. Many attendees found the workshop to be informative and inspiring.

On February 22, a group of international artists presented their work at the Shanghai Art Museum. The exhibition showcased a diverse range of art styles and techniques, reflecting the global nature of contemporary art.

On February 23, the Shanghai Art Museum hosted a panel discussion on the future of contemporary art. The panel featured experts from the art world, who discussed the challenges and opportunities facing the industry.

On February 24, the Shanghai Art Museum presented a farewell party for the artists who had been in residence at the museum. The event was a celebration of their contributions to the art community and the city.

Throughout the meeting, the focus was on making art accessible to everyone. The events were designed to engage the public and encourage a greater understanding of the role of art in society.

The 2008 Shanghai Annual Meeting was a success, with many attendees expressing satisfaction with the variety and quality of the events. The meeting served as a platform for artists to connect and share their work, and as a way for the public to explore and appreciate art in new ways.